Hepatitis B Vaccine Statement

Hepatitis B is a serious viral infection affecting the liver. Health care workers have a risk of contracting the disease through exposure to blood and body fluids. The Center for Disease Control and OSHA strongly recommend that health care workers be immunized against contracting Hepatitis B by receiving a series of three immunizations.

Students are not required to receive the Hepatitis B immunizations but some health care facilities do want to know if students using the facility for clinical learning experiences have had the immunizations. The cost of the immunizations is the responsibility of the student.
